South Beloit, IL, October 29, 2008 – Libertarian U.S. Senate Candidate Larry Stafford has announced that he will be spending election night with friends and supporters at the Lincoln Restaurant in Chicago.

“I had hoped to hold my election night festivities in Grant Park, but I understand someone beat me to it,” deadpanned Stafford, referring to reports that Democratic Presidential candidate Barack Obama will be holding his election night rally at the location.

The Lincoln Restaurant is located at 4008 N. Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, IL 60618. The doors open at 6:00 p.m.. There will be appetizers (donations appreciated) and a cash bar.

Other “liberty minded” candidates expected to attend include Steve Miller, who is running for a seat in the Illinois house, and Allan Stevo, a federal congressional candidate who was not allowed to be on the ballot this November and who is currently involved in a ballot access lawsuit in Illinois..

“I look forward to thanking everyone for their efforts in supporting our campaign,” said Stafford. “This has been quite an experience for me and I hope to shake a lot of hands and share a lot of laughs on November 4th,” he added.

“I have also been pleasantly surprised by the amount of media coverage our campaign has received,” he mentioned.

This has been Stafford's first run for elective office.

Stafford will be available to speak to reporters and media outlets on both Monday, November 3rd and on election day. Any media who wish to speak to Stafford are asked to contact his campaign spokesman, Valiant Vetter, at: 312/771-0090.
